Tarzan And The Lost Safari:

Tarzan character just goes on and on. When one season's champion swimmer becomes too portly, swollen headed or retires to save himself the trouble of keeping his torso in trim, up pops another and the series goes on.

The changing face of Tarzan didn't seem to worry the children at the first showing of "Tarian and the Lost Sufari" though — some of them would probably have thought that Johnny Welssmuller was a middle European statesman, und Gorden Scott was obviously good enough for them.. There wasn't the excited squealing that used to accompany the earlier series, nor shouts of "Look out behind you" but perhaps that's because the present younger generation have become a bit spoiled for jungle adventures and prefer the menaces from outer space.

The Adults

Adults-or shall we say, those older in years—are entered for by the presence in the picture of an estranged husband and wife (cice people, both, the pleture hosteris to assure us, but not quite adjusted) a comic opera newspaperman, played with every appearance of dis-comfort by Wilfrid Hyde While, a middle-aged playboy and his brassy girl friend and a Wick White Hunter, in the form of Robert Beatty.

Estranged husband is the pilot of an aircraft chartered by the playboy to whizz across Kenya at treetop level so that he may have all the advantages of secing the animals close to, without the discomforts. Girl friend takes along her mink and her make-up box, the newspaperman wears his hat all the time in the manner of all stage reporters, estranged wife wears an expression of sweet resignation most of the time and rich playboy looks bored.

Rescue! comes, its Tarzan, accompanied Cheetah, who comes to the and when his protector is killed rescue one jump ahead of the by another gunman, Johnny savage Opah tribe. As if these Concho's bluff is called, paint-smeared gentlemen aren't enough for one satart to cope with, Robert Beatty (who also whars his hat all the time) inslituates himself into the party with the object of keeping. the wife for himself and turning the others over to the Opahs for a cosy little teast, with themselves ng the main items on the menu. BRITAIN'S TRACK CHAMPION

WHAT sort of a man is Stirling Moss? It is not, perhaps, so very easy to say. "An Ace racingmotorist leads a queer life. He travels all over the world. The racing-motorist's life is a life lived in the limelight. Yet in some ways it is a life as much cut off from everyday concerns; as the life of a monk. There is not time or space in such a life for evenings at the "local", chats with the neighbours over the garden wall, football pools, or discussions about politics.

He takes a real tuned up to the last degree of mechanics bother about keeping his car tuned up. No wholly dedicated man is really quite the same sort of person as you are or I am.

Stirling Moss is not really, in what makes him tick, the same port of creature as most of the rest of us, he shows a remarkable sympathy and friendliness with the rest of us.

If there is a word "Little 'end" to describe the opposite of a "Big 'end" I would use it for Stirling Moss.

In the Mercedes-Benz, which was loaned to him during his season with the German team, there was a beautiful up-to-date German radio set that could get any conceivable wavelength. He never tired of playing with it, and showing it off to his friends.

Stirling Moss nover touches—and nover has touched — any workouts in the gymnasium. To race every week in Grand Pri and Sports Car events—with the attendant physical and mental fatigue—is quite enough exercise for any mon. He is boundingly energetic. Even after a good lunch, he never steps sedately into a taxi. The door is heid open, and he literally runs up the step. The sheer life and go in him makes his company very slimulating.

His temperament is a screne one. If some piece of bad luck -like the engine trouble that put him out of the race at Monaco when he might have won it, in 1955 -- crops up, well, there it is. There is no use mooning about it. Another chance will come. In this thoroughly sportsman-like attitude Moss differs from some other racing motorista who tend to grouch and grumble, to suik or to explode; who will not play the cards as they fall. In his screnity Moss is, as he says of Fangio, a "perfect example" to other motorists.

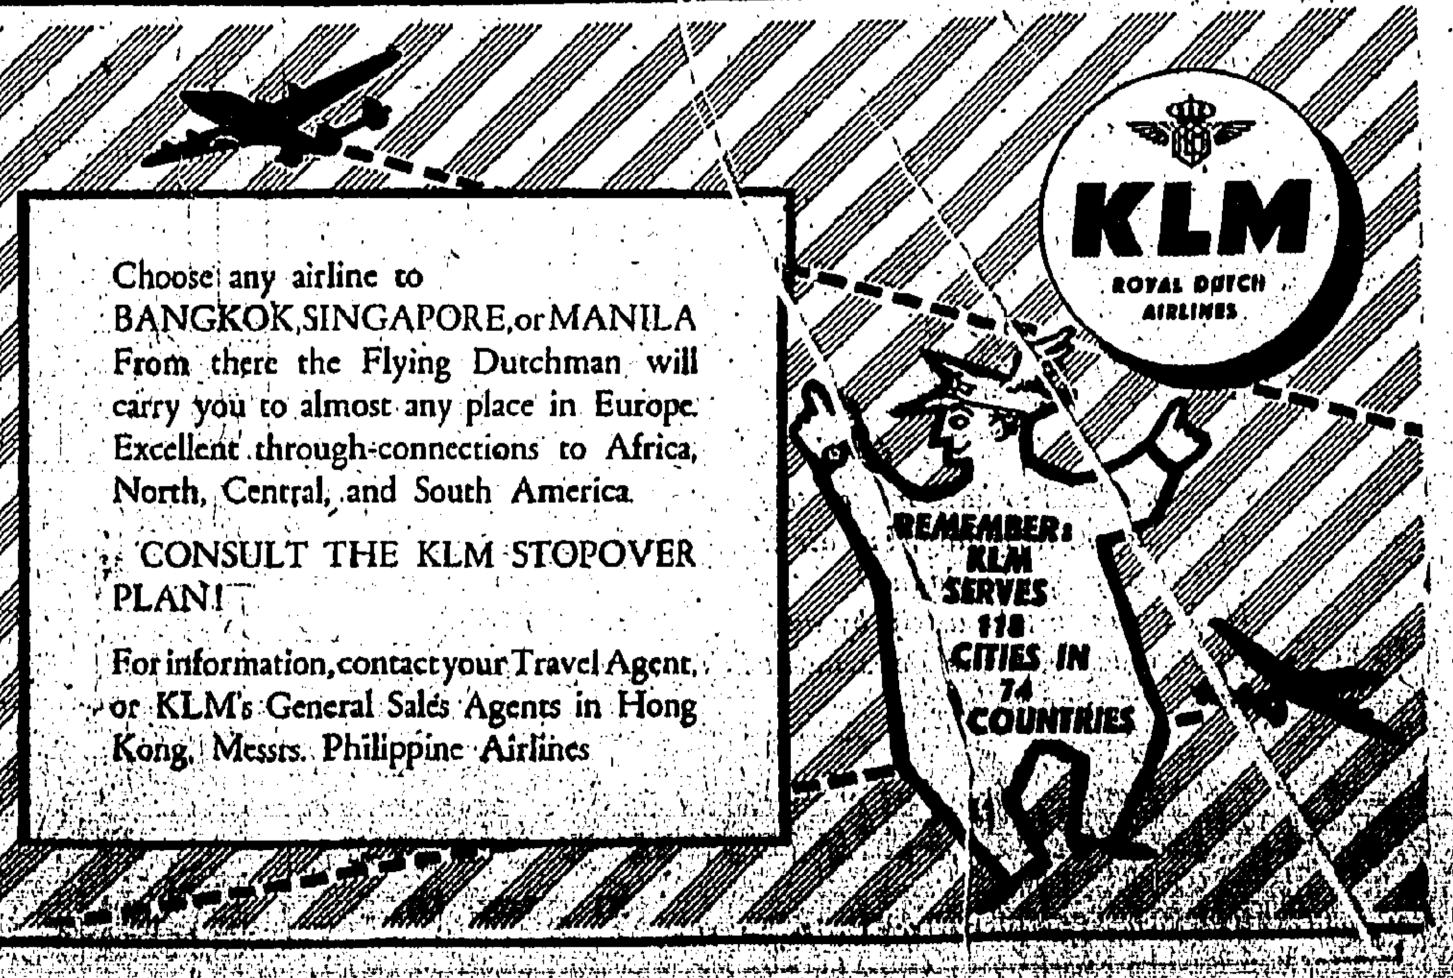

But what about the private life? Racing every week, spending nine weeks only of the year in England, moving rapidly from one country to another but can successfully never long enough to take any roots, there or even to get to know the country, its people, or its language well, Stirling Moss has perhaps not much spare time Fangio, for Moss, is the "per- for a private life. "He should have retired at 60 of course," said one

"I know. It's fantastic the way they let these old men hang on," the other exclaimed. "Before we know where we are we shall be making seventy the age for retirement." This was followed by derisive chuckle. of her Majesty's "Some nnd Majesty's Ministers seem to have been able to dodder on past 70," I observed, lowering the paper. "As for me, on the edge of 75, I'm working harder all the time than I ever worked. And let me add, enjoying life as much and perhaps more than I ever did."

They were both so politely apologetic that I retrained from saying to them as Father William once said to the young man, "Be off, or I'll kick you down-stairs."

Now I may as well admit at once that I have not been an old man long enough to be able to hear myself alluded to as an old man without being slightly slice or two of cake, and for surprised. The Press is kind about this: they call one o veteran, an epithet which one accepts with night I have some fresh fruit complacency. Sixty Or Sixteen

Naturally one expects those under 20 to regard one as very old because those under 20 regard 25 as late middle-age.

It is being called an old man by sexagenurians that I find a little galling. They should know by 60 that they feel the same as they felt at 16 in all essentials. So what right have they to suppose that 70 or 80 makes a man sharply aware of being old?
I enjoy what I believe to be the advantage of not having taken any violent exercise since I was an undergraduate; and of having taken no exercise at all for 30 and as little exercise as possible for 50 years.

I am not preaching that as a rule for others. Every man-must decide for himself how to approach old age. At the same time, I shall venture to speculate whether golf may not be responsible for a higher mortality than eigarette-smoking. The argument that if one is tied to a desk for seven hours a day exercise is necessary does not thake my opinion ...

And the best years are for those who leave themselves or can find a useful place in the world when their mind is as good as over it was, and their xest is at its best —— over 80.

Two candidates for the Urban Council 12.30 BORTON SYMPHONY Extraordinary Election, which is being held on Wednesday, will be presenting their platforms on Monday and Tuesday. Mr K. B. Allport will speak for the Civic Association at 8.10 p.m. on Monday. Mr Brook Bernacchi will speak for the Reform Club at 8.10 p.m. on Tuesday.

Broadcasting tomorrow and on Monday starts at eight o'clock in the morning and will be continuous throughout the day. One performance "Vienna Blood," which contains many of Strauss's well-loved and immortal melodies, including such well-known titles as "The Emperor Waltz" and "Artist's Life Waltz." This programme is at half-past one on Monday.

On Tuesday at half-past ten the versatile John Wallace takes upon himself the role of disc jockey in the first of a new series of programmes called "Look What I've Found." The title gives some indication of what listeners may expect, for John has been digging into the collections of records owned by his friends and into the darker, less accessible corners of some of the record shops.

What he finds there will be "Rigoletto" (Verdi); Softly Awakes heard on the programme and he Delhah" (Saint-Sasens); M'Appart hopes to introduce you to some from "Martha" (Flotow): Musetta's new recordings and to some Waltz Song from "La Boheme" (Puccial): O my beloved Father which have not been heard for from "Glanni Schiechi" (Puccini); some years.

On Friday at 10.30 p.m. Radio Hongkong is broadcasting h relayed commentary by Richard Dimbleby, recorded at Thursday's ocremony from his posttion on Horse Guards Parade, Whitehall, and listeners will also hear the band of the Life Guards and the massed bands and drums of the Brigade of Guards.

"This Week" - The world famous violinist, Ruggiero Ricci, is at present in Hongkong andduring his visit here he will be giving concerts and broadcasting ir. Radio Hongkong's Monday Recitul.

Listeners to "This Week" at 7.30 tonight will hear a recorded interview with Ruggiero Ricci and also an account of the opening on Thursday of the new Grantham Hospital at Aberdeen by His Excellency The Governor,

There will be a group of visiting musicians in Hongkong next week in the form of the United States Air Force Band, who made a very successful visit to the Colony last year. On Thursday at 8,15 Radio Hongkong will be broadcasting a recording made at one of next week's concerts and it is hoped 10 include not only the band, but also the Singing Sergeants and some of the talented of the concerts. "Ministering Angels" - On Wednesday evening, in the series "Ministering Angels", the story is that of Lady Mary Wortley Montague, beauty, wit and socialite of the eighteenth century.

M. MacTAVISH TAKES A LOOK OUR NEXT SOCCER SEASON

There May Not Be So Sports Diary Many Changes Of Affiliation

1956-57 season has now slipped into the record books and apart, from South China's final position as triple champions there is little cause to remember it with any particular pleasure.

It is usually accepted as conventional that at this time of the year soccer writers should take time out to produce a retrospect of the season, but, just as though I had to remind you, I have never worried very much about convention and the likes . . . so I hope you think, as I do, that it would be much more profitable if we were to do a bit of looking forward.

The soccer crystal gazer could very easily be heading for trouworth our while to speculate a did the game in Hongkong.

TN the pioneer days of the New World, there was ardent young hunter who spent much of his life in the dense forests shootling native animals.

One day when he wasespecially keen for the hunt, he took his gun and ammunition, and went far into the woods where even the sun did not penetrate; It was as dark as night. He wandered around silently, alert, but there was no animal in sight,

He was about to leave the scene when suddenly he heard a very faint sound and felt that he was He scarcely, dared to breathe, even.

Then a twig gently moved and behind it the hunter saw two beautiful eyes. He thought it was a deer and ordinarily ho would have that

YOUR BIRTHDAY ...By STELLA

SATURDAY, JUNE 8

ORN today, you are a person of many moods and too often your temperament gets the better of you, for you do and say things for which you are sorry the next moment. It would be far better if you would cultivate self-control and think fast. You have a great capacity for making friends among those who can be of help to you in furthering your career in the arts. You are talented in music and probably could succeed professionally

If you were to undertake this as your life career.
You have dramatic gifts as well, and if you do not utilise them on the stage, you probably will dramatise your own life in detail, making each opisode a tremendous drama. On the other hand, you are highly practical and quite farsighted in the affairs of others, yet seem to lose perspective when it comes to handling your own, personal affairs. You are perhaps a little too emotional. You hold to high ideals and if you do not realise them at once, you become dischuraged and morose. Here, again, is where self-control is needed. If you will exert patience, then you will discover that all turns out as you wish. Take a more philosophical attitude toward all problems and they are easily solved.

Since you have a great deal of determination, you will stick do a project until you achieve your goal. Just make sure that the goal in mind is the right and proper one. For adherence to the wrong thing can prove to be stubbornness when you are unwilling to adjust your mind to changing times.

DORN today, you are that unusual combination of artist and executive which makes it possible for you to capitalise on your talent when others, less astute in business affairs, yet quite as talented, end up by starving in the proverbial garret. You take pride in exact craftsmanship and have a capacity for infinite dotail. You are a perfectionist but the type whose tender care pays off in excellent dividends.

You are ambitious and enjoy associating with people who are doing exciting things. You find that you receive inspiration from such friends and might very easily build up a coterie of people with similar interests who will all work together toward a common goal.

Independent and rather proud, you have a great deal of confidence in your ability and seldom take "no" for an answer. If your plans are not accepted immediately, you will scheme and plan to reintroduce them in some other fashion so that eventually you get exactly what you want. The technical strategy usually succeeds.

Your ties of family and kin are very strong. If placed in a position of public trust, you may need to guard against giving members of the family too many jobs! You are reliable, steady in a crisis and can be called upon for help and advise at all times. Among those born on this date were: Samuel N. The answer to this man is that he is very right. South might well have tried the grand slam in no-trump after North's jump to seven spades. South could definitely have marked North with all three missing aces on his jump to seven. In that case South could count 12 tricks as follows: six in spades, two in hearts, three in diamonds and one in clubs. He could also be certain that North would hold the king of clubs. After all ho (South) held the three other kings. Finally, South might have gone one step further and reasoned that seven no-trump might be even safer than seven spades. The opening lead might be ruiffed at a spade contract whereas

CATCHES RECORD London, June 7.

Michael Stewart the Surrey opening batsman set up a world record for first class cricket today holding seven catches for his County in Northampton's second innings at Northampton,

His brilliant feat enabled Surrey to win by ten wickets and move into second place in the championship table, eight points behind Derby-

No fielder other than a wicketleceper has previously taken so many catches in an innings. The previous best was six achieved on three occasions by Walter Hammond. Six of Stewart's catches were at backward short leg and one in the gully.

SNAPPED UP

Fielding very close in, he eagerly snapped at the opportunities which came from the Northampton batsman trapped on a rain damaged pitch. Surrey, champions for, the past five years, lost to Northampton at the Oval only a week ago and had also lost in the previous three meetings between the two countries.

Derbyshire, surprise team of the season, beat Middlesex et Lords here by 163 runs to head the table with 84 points from seven games. It was their sixth successive victory. Like Surrey at Northampton they gained the two bonus points for a faster scoring rate per over on first
